Meet Donald Lloyd-Jones, M.D

Dr. Lloyd-Jones is a distinguished physician and educator who earned his BA from Swarthmore College in 1986, his MD from Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1991, and a Master of Science degree in Epidemiology from the Harvard School of Public Health in 2001. Dr. Lloyd-Jones' research interests include cardiovascular disease epidemiology, risk estimation, and prevention with a focus on research in investigation of the lifetime risks for various cardiovascular diseases, and factors that modify those risks. Dr. Lloyd Jones chaired the committee and authored the monograph that defined and set the American Heart Association's Strategic Impact Goals for 2010-2020, including a bold new focus on cardiovascular health promotion. He was co-chair of the Risk Assessment Work Group and a member of the Cholesterol Treatment Guidelines Panel for the 2013 ACC/AHA Guidelines for Cardiovascular Disease Risk Reduction. He has authored over 300 scientific publications, and in both 2014 and 2015, he was named by Thomson Reuters as a "Highly Cited Researcher," a distinction reserved for investigators in the top 1% by total citations of highly cited papers in their scientific field (in this case, clinical medicine)
